

Giraffes Can't Dance

Blunderbus Theatre Company

Join Gerald and friends as another children's favourite is given the Blunderbus treatment. This simple moral tale about difference is told by four actor/puppeteers and an assortment of jungle creatures through a mixture of prose, song and dance. The performers are far better puppeteers than actors, and there are some problems with sound and diction, but the superb puppets are the stars of the show, and ably manipulated. The songs are catchy, and the dances fun, but at times the show feels a little long and the kids became restless. They make good use of the space and aisles, though, making sure the kids (and adults!) were involved, and got a chance to see Gerald and the others close up.

The Space @ Royal College of Surgeons, 7 - 29 Aug (not 16), times vary, prices vary, fpp 11

published: Aug-2009